Irish party, or, if he should withdraw, whom he will recommend to succeed him. There is no likelihood of the contest for the position. They include John Dillon, Justin McCarthy, Henry St. John, William O'Brien, and T. P. O'Connor, and each has his following. It is believed that eventually the contest will be between Dillon and O'Brien.

LONDON, 24th January.
With all that said and printed about the Parnell divorce, the fact is that the case is very far from being settled. The divorce is not so much a matter of the law as of the facts. Parnell will not be heard until the year is well advanced.

Until he is heard Parnell will continue in all respects his public work just as he has of late years, and he will not be heard until the year is well advanced.

MISCELLANEOUS.
Mr. Gladstone, in an article in the Catholic Magazine, "Morris England," expresses his opinion in favour of a revival of the practice of confession in this country.
